

State Student Y.M.C.A. Conference

The State Student Y. M. C. A. Conference will be held in Berea December 3, 4, 5. There will be a number of great speakers in Berea during these few days, among whom are Dr. E. M. Potat, of New York, and Dr. J. L. Kelsor, of the Y. M. C. A. College, Nashville, Tenn. Besides these, there will be a number of Y. M. C. A. secretaries and workers who have had a great deal of experience in student work. The complete program for the conference is given below. There will be announcements made from time to time concerning any changes that may occur. This meeting of the students of the colleges of the State of Kentucky, with some of the greatest men of the country, is going to be one of the most enriching events that will touch the lives of Kentucky students this year. Some of the meetings are for the delegates alone, but there will be events open for the general public. Everyone is invited to make the most of these opportunities. The Y. M. C. A. here wishes to express its appreciation for the fine spirit of co-operation on the part of the churches and citizens of the town in opening their doors to our guests from other colleges.

There will be a dinner at two o'clock Friday afternoon, December 3, in the Vocational Chapel for the faculty representatives from Kentucky colleges and a few other invited guests. At 2:45 all faculty men will be invited to Vocational Chapel for a brief program. President Hutchins will preside. Dr. Hart from Danville will speak on the students' relation to the Christian work in the college. Dr. Hart will be followed by Dr. Raine, of Berea College, who will speak on the faculty's relations to the Christian work in the college. It is expected also that Dr. Vander Mullen, the new President of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, will give an address. Dr. Vander Mullen is a new man in this State, and he has a reputation as a fine speaker.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

League of Nations Assembly is Trying to Find Some Way to Save Armenia.

AMERICA ASKED TO MEDIATE

Balfour Suspects Plan to Recognize Kemal Pasha—Poles and Bolsheviks Resume Negotiations—Affairs in Greece—Murders and Reprisals in Dublin.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

What shall be done to save Armenia? That is the question that absorbed much of the attention of the League of Nations assembly last week, and it is not yet solved, nor, apparently, in the way of being solved. The Armenian problem was forced on the attention of the assembly by the repeated questions of members of delegations whose countries would not be involved, and the representatives of the greater powers were compelled to take it up. The net result, so far, is the appointment of a commission which will examine the Armenian situation. Sir Robert Cecil, South Africa, is its chairman, and the other members are: Senator Henri La Fontaine, Belgium; Doctor Fridtjof Nansen, Norway; Honorio Pueyrredon, Argentina; Signor Schanzer, Italy, and Rene Viviani, France.

In the course of the debate Viviani proposed that the league council should seek some government which will mediate for Armenia with the Turkish nationalists and try to obtain a cessation of hostilities. The council thereupon cabled to President Wilson asking the United States to act as mediator in the case, pointing out that although the senate had rejected the mandate for Armenia, a new situation had arisen and a new solution was possible. The United States is not asked to send an expeditionary force and only a small outlay of money will be necessary, since we are asked merely to represent Armenia by entering negotiations toward ending warfare with Kemal Pasha. It is believed in Geneva that the Nationalist leader would welcome America as mediator because the fixing of the boundaries of Armenia was left to President Wilson.

M. Viviani declared that the United States would be the most logical power to represent Armenia in the proposed negotiations, and that the fact that it was not a member of the league would not interfere. Some correspondents saw in all this talk an endeavor to "lure" the United States into the league. Mr. Balfour saw more than this in the French plan. He believed it was the beginning of an effort to tear up the treaty of Sevres with Turkey and to deprive Greece of the territory given her by that pact; also that it was designed first to recognize Mustafa Kemal Pasha. He demanded whether the Kemalists would be offered money or territory as a bribe to cease attacking the Armenians, and said Kemal was entirely indifferent about the league's opinion; furthermore, he did not believe a mandatory power for Armenia could be found anywhere in the world, and said the league could not send an expedition into Asia Minor unless it was under the control of some treaty signing power.

Various delegates asserted their belief that the United States would now accept the mandate and furnish the expeditionary force, which, according to Doctor Nansen of Norway, would require 60,000 men and $100,000,000. High French officials in Paris said on Wednesday that France would not send a man or spend a franc on an Armenian mandate, but intimated that she might ask Kemal Pasha what changes in the treaty would make it acceptable to him.

The league subcommittee on new members has decided not to admit states carved out of the former Russian empire—Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Ukraine; and undoubtedly this means that Azerbaijan, Georgia and other states in the Caucasus will be refused admittance. This accords with the position taken by the United States administration some weeks ago.

The league council decided to limit the scope of policing operations to the Vilna region and to keep the league "army" down to 1,800 men. Of these Spain will supply 300, Sweden 100, France at least 1,000, and Great Britain and Belgium small detachments. Holland and Switzerland refused to participate.

Peace negotiations between Poland and Soviet Russia were resumed after a lapse that threatened the renewal of active hostilities. The Poles, however, consented to withdraw their troops to the armistice line. Moscow notified Lithuania that the Red forces would have to occupy Vilna, which is still in the hands of General Zeigowski. The Soviet government has now pretty nearly cleared Russia of all its active opponents. Petlura's troops have about all escaped from the Uk-rairie into Poland and have been disarmed there, and now it is announced that General Semenov's campaign in Siberia has collapsed entirely. His last base has been taken by the Reds, the corps that was defending it having mutinied, killed its officers and joined the Bolsheviks. Semenov himself has fled to Japan.

Unless the temper of the Greek people changes, they will vote, on December 5, for the return of Constantine to the throne. This will be the logical outcome of the victory of Gounaris and Rallis in the election. However, the new government is placed in a somewhat uncomfortable position, for to restore the ex-king will be to alienate France and possibly Great Britain. The former has warned Greece that it will withdraw its material and moral support, but it is not known certainly what attitude Lloyd George will assume. The Greek newspapers favorable to Constantine assert that Great Britain is willing to recognize the right of Greece to manage her own affairs and that King George is in constant communication with Constantine and has assented to his return to the throne.

Of course, Rallis and his confreres are most worried over the possible effect of the restoration on Greece's adventure in Asia Minor. They can hardly hope to maintain their army there against the Turkish nationalists and the Arabs without the active cooperation of the entente allies, and, too, they rely on the British to supply the money needed for the occupation. It is said by them that Venizelos left the treasury empty, destroyed quantities of documents and left Athens without informing their successors of the state of business in the various departments.

Queen Mother Olga, the regent, staged a triumphal return last week for two of Constantine's brothers, Prince Andreas and Prince Christopher. They were received by enthusiastic crowds and escorted to the palace. The same day the foreign newspaper correspondents made formal complaint that the press censorship was being continued and that their dispatches were suppressed or delayed. Rallis and Gounaris made explanations and promised all restrictions should be removed.

Paris had press dispatches from Smyrna saying the Greek army in Asia Minor was split into two camps, one for and one against Constantine, and that fighting between them already had broken out. Some of the troops were said to be demobilizing themselves, declaring they were done with the war against the Turks.

The row between the Western Union Telegraph company and the administration has reached the acute stage. It has to do with the laying of certain cables at Biscayne bay, Miami, Fla., permission for which was granted some time ago. Connected with it was the attempt to land a cable from Barbados, which the Navy department prevented. The company thereupon declined to carry further messages for the State department at reduced rates, and the Navy department threatened to destroy the bay cable if the construction work was not stopped. The company applied for an injunction to restrain Secretary Daniels from interfering with the work, and the next day Secretary of War Baker revoked the permit for the laying of the cables. The courts must now decide the entire matter.

World News

The League of Nations, in its first meeting in Geneva, is accomplishing things that are worth while. A decision has been reached that meetings of the Council and even of committees shall be public. This is a new order of things in world affairs. Representatives of the press, at the close of the meeting, are given statements that they are at liberty to send to their papers, making known the important happenings. Committees have been appointed to report on the matter of armaments and the Court of Justice. Far-reaching questions have been asked in regard to the control of raw materials by nations which possess them in abundance. A movement has been started to aid Armenia, and the question of mandates has received discussion.

The ex-empress of Germany is reported in a low condition as a result of heart trouble. She has expressed a desire to return to her own country, and if that cannot be granted, it is her wish to be buried in Germany. She left the country, voluntarily, in order that she might be of aid and comfort to the emperor in his exile. Throughout the hard experiences that have come to the family, she has borne herself as befits her position and her condition merits the sympathy it is receiving. It is not believed her life will be a long one.

A large group of Oxford professors have sent to Germany a communication which expresses in friendly and dignified form the wish that there may be a renewal of good feeling between the scholars of the two countries. It has been received by some professors in the spirit of friendship and by others as a piece of stupid impudence. We are reminded of the memorial signed by ninety-three German professors in the day of the war endorsing their country's position and condemning England in severe terms. Of these professors seventeen have died and a majority of the remainder have recanted on the ground that they were deceived and misled.

A note of Secretary Colby in regard to the products of Mesopotamia is discussed from various points of view in the English papers. The United States expresses the opinion that England's mandate in this rich section of country, which has come to her, shall not monopolize the products, but that there shall be a free opportunity for other countries to profit by the rich supplies. The English papers are not inclined to fall in readily with this idea, but report that the United States should assume some responsibilities before pressing so strongly for privileges.

Through some influence not yet known, Jugo-Slavia has surrendered to Italy the Province of Istria on the east side of the Adriatic sea and some islands that lie off the coast. It is believed that this has been brought about to appease Italy for the Fiume settlement, which was not satisfactory to her. The territory received greatly strengthens Italy's position on the Adriatic. The prime minister who made the surrender, however, was obliged to resign, an act which shows the disapproval of the people of the country.

The United States Commission of Immigration is preparing for a large influx of foreigners as soon as the restrictions are removed. He expects 1,000,000 Poles, 4,500,000 Italians and 5,000,000 Slavs in the near future. In some cases the European countries seem to be encouraging the movement, especially such countries as Italy, where there are few natural resources. It is believed that the people of these countries can do more for the welfare of their home land by laboring in America than by staying at home, themselves.

A very practicable form of help in the reconstruction of France is that of a Massachusetts woman of wealth, who has undertaken to rebuild a whole village at her own expense. The place is known as Hatton-Chatel, and it has a population of about 300. Very little beside the market place was left by the Germans. Other help of a similar kind is being given, and Americans are engaged in restoring forests, railroads and other necessities to the life of France. Much of this does not receive mention of a public nature, but it creates good will.

The funeral services were conducted at the residence in Berea on November 21 by the Christian minister, W. J. Hudspeth. It was a touching, impressive and appropriate service. A quartet, consisting of Henry Muncy, Ora Gabbard, Laura Gabbard and W. J. Hudspeth, added to the impressiveness of the occasion.

The remains were taken to Locust Branch, where the burial took place. These services were in charge of the Masons.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Last Lord's Day the services proved to be quite interesting and profitable. Under the leadership of Superintendent R. R. Harris the Bible school is much better organized. The day ended with a fine Endeavor meeting at 6:15, with a larger attendance and much interest and enthusiasm. The contest, which has been on for sometime between the "blues" and "reds", ends in about two weeks, with a social to be given by the defeated side. Taylor Gibson, as president of the society, with his splendid helpers, is succeeding well.

Next Lord's Day the Bible school meets at 9:45, followed by communion and preaching. The subject of the sermon will be, "How to Live a Long Time," addressed primarily to the children, but an effort will be made to make it profitable to all. The Endeavor meeting will be at 6:15 and you will miss a rare treat if you do not come. Everybody welcome.

The Health and Social Hygiene department and the Civic department will meet at the same time with Mrs. R. H. Cowley, Prospect street. These departments are co-operating admirably with Miss English in her Red Cross work. She spoke interestingly to them at their last meeting.

The Education and Music departments will meet with Mrs. Charles D. Lewis. They will probably be able to secure a teacher of public school music for the public school of Berea, beginning the first of January. Their untiring efforts in this line of work are commendable.

Public Health And Nursing

A few days ago an editorial dealing with the shortage of nurses and doctors in America appeared in the New York Tribune. The discussion was later taken up by other dailies, and various suggestions for the solution of the problem were made. Leading all answers to queries made by the Tribune for suggestions was "the nurse and doctor must be better paid." The second leading answer was, "The course for registered nurses is too long."

Referring to the first answer, we must say we are not quite ready to agree that these two public servants are underpaid. There are certain professions whose value cannot be estimated in terms of money. Among these are preaching, teaching, and ministering to the sick. When a life is hanging by a thread and the faithful doctor and nurse stay by, and the life is saved, any financial consideration would be a feeble remuneration. It is hoped that no doctor or nurse ever undertakes to balance the services rendered by the charges made. The nurse and doctor must expect a fair and equitable remuneration. They must get enough to keep the science to the top-notch of efficiency, and their families in comfort. And we believe a careful investigation of the incomes of competent doctors, and nurses, too, for that matter, will show that they rank higher than any of the ministering professions.

The second answer made to the Tribune's inquiry will provoke controversy. The medical profession almost universally demands that all courses for nurses be long and technical, while there are many worthy people who maintain, and can demonstrate, that a shorter practical course for nurses, emphasizing general community health, is more desirable for the needs of the average community than a long technical course which trains the nurse to take interest only in acute emergency cases.

The greatest need in Kentucky today is a health crusade. Every school and every organization that exists in the great rural sections of our State should be enlisted in a better health campaign. It is coming, but along with it must come an ample supply of community nurses. They should have the best preparation possible for their great work. It should include a mastery of the elemental laws of psychology, a course in social service, as well as the regular course in caring for the sick. Psychology will train them how to handle and lead people. Social service will bring out the relationship between health, hygiene and social habits. And a practical knowledge of the fundamental laws of life and death will enable them to give the proper treatment at the proper time.

Nursing is a profession which should make a loud appeal to all women who have an inclination to be helpful to their fellow-men. It is not a profession open to persons disappointed in life, or those not knowing what they want to do. Listen to the words of Florence Nightingale, whose life and character have glorified the profession. She said, "It is a commonly received idea among men, and even among women themselves, that it requires nothing but a disappointment in love, a woman without an object, with general disgust and incapacity for other things, to turn a woman into a good nurse. This reminds one of a parish where a stupid old man was set to be a schoolmaster because he was past keeping the pigs." Apply the above receipt for making a good nurse to making a good servant, and the receipt will be found to fail. The every-day management of a large ward, let alone of a hospital, the knowing what are the laws of life and death for man—are not these matters of sufficient importance and difficulty to require learning by experience and careful inquiry, just as much as any other art? They do not come by inspiration to the lady disappointed in love, nor to the poor workhouse drudge, hard up for a livelihood."

These are eloquent words, spoken by the Queen of Nurses, whose praises were sung by thousands of men in three great wars, whose life has been a benediction to millions of people, and whose name is revered wherever the foot of civilization has trod. There is a shortage of thousands of nurses in the United States. Two thousand could be used today in the South alone. Humanity needs them and is ready to pay for them. Young women, wake up and answer the call!

MRS. DESHA BRECKENRIDGE

Kentucky has been most fortunate in having a group of women to lead in constructive social welfare work among the citizens of the Commonwealth. Practically every important step taken in recent years towards improving the health and civic conditions of the people has been championed by the women's clubs, and the majority of these movements have originated in the women's clubs.

One of the leaders in club work for a number of years was Mrs. Desha Breckenridge. Among the group of brilliant women who have done so much for the State, she easily occupied a first place. As a publicist and platform speaker she had no superior in America.

Everything that was constructive and worth while in welfare work attracted her attention. She championed the cause of woman suffrage from the time when men merely smiled at the mention of it till it became a reality through federal amendment. She was a central factor in the campaign against tuberculosis from its very beginning. She took an active part in the upheaval in Kentucky educational affairs a few years ago that resulted in great improvement in public schools. Social legislative measures always demand much of her time. Everything for improving life conditions among her people appealed to her. It was customary for those who sought to promote special social measures to seek her endorsement early. It was likewise customary for the leaders of civic and social welfare organizations to seek her advice and invite her to share the executive responsibility. In all matters related to the public good she was a worthy descendant of her great-grandfather, Henry Clay.

I never knew her in her home life. I knew her only as the aggressive, constructive worker for the common good. But no one who possessed the passion for helping humanity as she did could fail to be gentle and affectionate and supremely ideal in her home relations.

When the history of social welfare work in Kentucky is written, a first place will be accorded Mrs. Breckenridge.

Berea Publishing Company,
Gentlemen:

Enclosed find my check for $1.50 for which please send me The Citizen for one year. I feel at a loss without it, as I spent forty years of my life in Owsley, Jackson, Clay and Rockcastle counties. I presume my friends and kinsfolk would like to know what has become of me. I am still in the land of the living. I own a large dairy farm near Port Crane, N.Y., only seven miles north of Binghamton, N. Y., one of the fastest growing cities of the grand old state of New York. This is a good farming and dairying country, but few people on the farms that are able to do much work, as nearly all the young people have gone to the cities, as this is a great manufacturing state. We have fine roads and good schools and churches. Have also the best markets for all farm products. Good farms can be purchased here with stock and tools, only a few hundred dollars down and small payments each year. If there is anyone that would like to locate here, if they will write me, I will put them in touch with some reliable real estate company. With best wishes to The Berea Citizen and its many readers.

COMMUNITY THANKSGIVING AT SILVER CREEK

The people of Silver Creek neighborhood will long remember Thanksgiving Day, 1920. It was entirely a home-made affair. Plans were made some weeks previous by the recently organized Sunday-school at the Wednesday night Community meeting. Various committees were appointed, whose splendid work deserves high praise. A number of young men met at the church the day before Thanksgiving and put in new window lights, arranged tables and helped decorate the building. Some men with teams hauled gravel to fill mud holes and make a good walk from the pike to the schoolhouse.

The school children under Mrs. Anderson gave a nice program in the forenoon at the schoolhouse, which was greatly enjoyed by a full house. Following this the boys and men took part in athletic stunts, including a tug of war, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Promptly at noon the crowd went to the church nearby, where the committee (a number of good housewives) had beautifully prepared a most bountiful dinner, set on three monstrous tables which fairly groaned under innumerable dishes of chicken, boiled ham, baked beans, salads preserves, jellies, pies, cakes, etc. These large tables had to be set the second time to accommodate all the people, and yet many baskets were not opened at all.

The after dinner program was made up of appropriate songs and service of praise. Thanksgiving was expressed by a number of local people. Young and old took part and enjoyed the services in true Thanksgiving spirit. It was an inspiring sight to see children, parents and grandparents grouped about the organ blending their voices in songs of praise. Mr. Bowman gave an impressive talk to parents. A free-will offering was generously given to pay for window lights, fuel, etc.

Altogether it was a most inspiring and happy occasion, of which any community may be justly proud. Plans are now being made for a Christmas exercise and other pleasant occasions will be enjoyed from time to time.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D.,
Teacher of English Bible in the Moody
Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(©, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 5

THE GROWTH OF THE KINGDOM.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 13:24-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—Fret not thyself because of evil-doers.—Ps. 37:1.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Gal. 6:6-10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story About Good Seed and Bad Seed.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of the Wheat and the Tares.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Wheat and Tares.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How the Kingdom of Heaven Grows.

The parables of this chapter set forth in a graphic way the condition of affairs in the interval between Christ's going away and His coming again.

I. The Parable of the Wheat and Tares (vv. 24-30, cf. 36-43).

1. The Sowers. (1) The Son of Man (v. 37). He is the One who sows the good seed. The field in which they are sown is the world. (2) The Devil (v. 39). He is in a peculiar sense Christ's enemy. He intensely hates Him, and with relentless energy is striving to defeat His purpose in saving men. While men slumber, he sows tares among the wheat.

2. The growing crops. They are not easily distinguished while growing, but the effects produced when eaten are quite different. The wheat is wholesome, but the tares produce illness. The chief danger in the tares lies in their resemblance to wheat. The chief danger of the devil is that he strives to imitate God.

3. The harvest. There comes a time when the fruitage of the growing crops shall be gathered. For the tares there is a furnace of fire where there shall be walling and gnashing of teeth. The righteous shall be gathered into the Lord's garner and shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of the Father.

II. The Parable of the Mustard Seed (vv. 31, 32).

1. Its important beginning. It begins as the least of all seeds and grows to be the greatest among herbs. The parentage and humble circumstances of the King greatly perplexed the people. That twelve unlettered fishermen should be selected as His royal advisers is still more amazing. The prophet said concerning Him that He should be despised, rejected, forsaken.

2. Its vigorous growth. From very small beginnings the influence of the Christ has gone forth so that there is no power or influence so great as that of Christianity.

3. Its lodging capacity. The birds which find lodgment in the tree do not represent the children of men which find safety and salvation in the church. Birds constitute no part of the tree. The bird is something foreign to and independent of the tree. The branches increase the growth of the tree, but birds are injurious and burdensome to it. They are predatory—waiting to pluck the tender buds or to prey upon the ripened fruit. The effect of such lodging is evil, blighting and spoiling to the tree.

III. The Parable of the Leavened Meal (v. 33).

1. The meal. Meal has a wholesome and nutritious effect. It was used in one of the sweet-savor offerings, which typified Christ (Lev. 2:1-3, R. V.); it was food for the priests (Lev. 6:15-17, R. V.); Abraham had Sarah knead a cake out of three measures of meal for the angelic messengers (Gen. 18:6); Solomon's royal table was provided with meal (I Kings 4:22); Elijah was fed upon a cake made of meal (II Kings 4:41); Elisha used meal as an antidote for the poison of death in the pot (II Kings 4:38-41).

2. The woman. The woman is not the head of the home, but its administrator. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head, prepare and distribute it to the children. In Scripture we find false doctrine being taught by a woman (Rev. 2:20). Dealing with doctrine is forbidden to woman (I Tim. 2:12). In I Tim. 4:1-3; II Tim. 2:17, 18; 4:3, 4; II Pet. 2:1-3, we find that apostasy will be brought in through false teachings within the ranks of God's people. The meaning, then, of the parable is that the true doctrine, the meal given for the nourishment of the children of the kingdom (II Pet. 2:2; I Tim. 4:6), would officially be corrupted by false doctrine. The children's food is corrupted by the mother.

3. The leaven. In Scripture, leaven is invariably a type of evil. Let the following examples suffice as proof: (1) All through the Old Testament leaven is a continual and unvarying type of evil (Ex. 12:15; Lev. 2:11). (2) Jesus himself makes leaven to denote sin (Matt. 16:6, 12; Mark 8:15). (3) Paul uses leaven in its usual biblical sense (I Cor. 5:6-8; Gal. 5:8, 9).

Nothing Too Little.

Our Lord teaches that nothing is too little to be ordered by our Father, nothing too little in which to see His hand, nothing which touches our souls too little to accept from Him, nothing too little to be done for Him. Since the hairs of our head are all numbered, so is every throb or shoot of pain, every beating or aching of the heart. Every tear which starts is seen, and if wept to Him is gathered up to Him. Every secret wish and prayer He hears while yet unuttered or unformed.—Dr. Pusey.

TUBERCULOSIS V.

By Dr. R. H. Cowley

What am I to do if I find that I have contracted tuberculosis?

If the disease is located in the bone, joint, or lymph glands and is diagnosed early it is usually readily cured. The longer the disease exists before being discovered, the harder it is to cure. Tuberculosis of the glands, especially in the neck, is usually diagnosed early, but when it is in the spine, the hip joint or other obscure bone, it is frequently called rheumatism for a year or more; and when recognized for what it is, it has gone so far as to be very difficult to cure.

The cure for these kinds of tuberculosis consists in absolute rest of the part and the use of tuberculin. The part must be put at rest in a plaster cast and kept so till entirely healed. This may take many months, but it is the only way out, and must be done whatever trouble and expense it may cause.

The tuberculin treatment is especially good for these cases. Some doctors do not believe in using tuberculin in any case, but the men who specialize in the treatment of tuberculosis all use it, and when it is properly used it produces wonderful results, especially in the bone, joint and glandular type of the disease.

For tuberculosis of the spine there has been lately devised a very ingenious operation. It consists in removing a piece of bone from the shin bone, long enough to reach over five or six vertebrae. This piece of bone is placed in the back in such a way that it lines against the spines of the diseased vertebrae and the two above and the two below. It grows in solid and acts as a splint holding the spine stiff over the diseased part and so taking the place of the part that has been dissolved away by the disease.

These cases are all hopeful if they are recognized early. If let go too long, they may require extensive operations and even with the best of care may be impossible to cure. The next article will deal with the diagnosis of consumption or pulmonary tuberculosis. Don't miss it. If you don't need it, your neighbor does.

Breakfast and Harris' speech came to an end simultaneously, and the subject was dropped for the time. In a few minutes Jim had his team hitched to the tank wagon in the yard. The men jumped aboard and the wagon rattled down the road to where the engine and plows sat in the stubble field.

"What notion's this father's got about Riles, do you suppose, mother?" asked Beulah, as the two women bustled themselves with the morning work in the kitchen.

"Dear knows," said her mother, wearily. "I hope he doesn't take it in his head to go out there, too."

"Who, Dad? Oh, he wouldn't do that. His heart's quite wrapped up in the farm here. I wish he'd unwrap it a bit and let it peek out at times."

"I'm not so sure. I'm beginning to think it's the money that's in the farm your father's heart is set on. If the money was to be made somewhere else his heart would soon shift. Here I've slaved and saved until I'm an old woman, and what better are we for it? We've a ter things to eat and more things to wear and a bigger house to keep clean, and your father thinks we ought to be satisfied. But he isn't satisfied himself. He's slaving harder than ever, and now he's got this notion about going West. Oh, you'll see it will come to that. He knows our life isn't complete, and he thinks more money will complete it. All the experience of twenty years hasn't taught him any better."

Beulah stood aguish at this outburst, and when her mother paused and looked at her, and she saw the unbidden wells of water gathering in the tender eyes, the girl could no longer restrain herself. With a cry she flung her arms about her mother's neck, and for a few moments the two forgot their habitual restraint and were but naked souls mingling together.

"Your father is hungry," said the mother. "Hungry—hungry, and he thinks that more land, more money, more success, will fill him. And in the meantime he's forgetting the things that would satisfy—the love that was ours, the little dove—Oh, child, what am I saying? What an unfaithful creature I am? You must forget, Beulah, you must forget these words—words of shame they are!"

"The shame is his," declared the girl, defiantly, "and I won't stand this nonsense about homesteading again—I just won't stand it. If he says anything more about it I'll—I'll fly off, that's what I'll do. And I've a few remarks for him about Riles that won't keep much longer. The old badger—he's at the bottom of all this."

"You mustn't quarrel with your father, dearie, you mustn't do that."

"I'm not going to quarrel with him, but I'm going to say some things that need saying. And if it comes to a showdown, and he must go—well, he must, but you and I will stay with the old farm, won't we, mother?"

"There, there now," the mother said, gently stroking her daughter's hair. "Let us forget this, and remember how much we have to be thankful for. We have our health, and our home, and the bright sunshine, and—I declare," she interrupted, catching a glimpse of something through the window, "if the cows haven't broken from the lower pasture and are all through the out-field! You'll have to take Collie and get them back, somehow, or bring them up to the corral."

Pulling a sun-bonnet upon her head Beulah called the dog, which came leaping upon her with boisterous affection, and hurried down the path to the field where the cows stood almost lost in a jungle of green oats. She soon located the breach in the fence and, with the help of the dog, quickly turned the cows toward it. But alack! just as victory seemed assured a rabbit was frightened from its hiding-place in the green oats and sailed forth in graceful bounds across the pasture. The dog, of course, concluded that the capture of the rabbit was of much more vital importance to the Harris homestead than driving any number of stupid cattle, and darted across the field in pursuit, wasting his breath in sharp, eager yelps as he went. Whereupon the cows turned outward again, not holistically nor insolently, but with a calm persistence that steadily wore out the girl's strength and patience. She was in no joyous mood at best, and the perverseness of things aggravated her beyond endurance. Her callings to the cattle became more and more tearful, and presently ended in a sob.

"There, now, Beulah, don't worry; we will have them in a minute," said a quiet voice, and looking about she found Jim almost at her elbow, his omnipresent smile playing gently about his white teeth. "I was down at the creek filling the tank, when I saw you had a little rebellion on your hands, and I thought re-enforcements might be in order."

"You might 've hollered farther back," she said, half reproachfully, but there was a light of appreciation in her eye when she dared raise it toward him. "I'm afraid I was beginning to be very—foolish."

She tripped again on the treacherous beehive, but he held her arm in a strong grasp against which the weight of her slim figure seemed but as a feather blown against a wall. Then they set about their task, but the sober-eyed cows had no thought of being easily deprived of their feast, and it was some time before they were all turned back into the pasture and the fence temporarily repaired behind them.

"I can't thank you enough," Beulah was saying. "You just keep piling one kindness on top of another. Say, Jim, honest, what makes you do it?"

But at that moment the keen blast of an engine whistle came cutting through the air—a long clear note, followed by a series of toots in rapid succession.

"I guess they're running short of water," said Jim. "I must hustle." So saying he ran to the ford of the creek where the tank-wagon was still standing, and in a minute his strong frame was swaying back and forth to the rhythmic clanking of the pump.

Meanwhile other things were transpiring. Harris had returned from town the night before with the fixed intention of paying an early visit to the Farther West. He and Riles had spent more time than they should breathing the village air, while the latter drew a picture of rising color of the possibilities which the new lands afforded. Harris was not a man who abused himself with liquor, and Riles, too, rarely forgot that indulgence was expensive, and had to be paid for in cash. Moreover, Allan occasioned his father some uneasiness. He was young, and had not yet learned the self-control to be expected in later life. More than once of late Allan had crossed the boundary of moderation and John Harris was by no means indifferent to the welfare of his only son. Indeed, the bond between the two was so real and so intense that Harris had never been able to bring himself to contemplate their separation, and the boy had not even so much as thought of establishing a home of his own. The idea of homesteading together assured further years of close relationship between father and son, and the younger man fell in wholeheartedly with it.

"We'll hurry up the plowing, Dad, and run west before the harvest is on us," Allan said as they rode home through the darkness. "We can file our land and get back for the fall work. Then we will go out for the winter and commence our duties. The only question is, can they grow anything on that land out there?"

"That's what they used to ask when we came to Manitoba," said his father. "And there were years when I doubted the answer myself. Some parts were frozen out year after year, and they're among the best in the country now, and never think of frost. The same thing'll happen out there, and we might as well be in the game."

To do him justice, it was not altogether the desire for more wealth that prompted Harris. It was the call of new land; the call he had heard and answered in the early eighties; the old appetite that had lain dormant for a quarter of a century, but was still in his blood, waiting only a suggestion of the open spaces, a whiff from dry grass on the wind-swept plains, the zigzag of a wagon-trail streaking afar into the horizon, to set it tingling again.

So this morning father and son were especially anxious that not a moment of their plowing weather should be lost, and it was particularly aggravating when the hired man's long delay resulted in a bubbling sputter followed by a dry hiss from the injector, warning the engineer that the water-tank was empty. Allan shot an anxious glance down the road to the coulee, but the water team was not in sight. Seizing the whistle cord, he sent its peremptory summons into the air. Harris looked up from the plows, and the two exchanged frowns of annoyance. But the water stood high in the glass, and Allan did not reduce the speed, although he cut the link action another notch to get every ounce of advantage from the expansion. But the water went down, down in the glass, and still there was no sign of a further supply. Allan again cut the air with his whistle, and at length, with a muttered imprecation, he slammed the throttle shut and jumped from the engine.

"Keep a keen eye on your fire," said Harris, "and I'll go down and see what's wrong with him." So the farmer strode off across the plowed field. The delay annoyed him, and he felt unreasonably cross with Travers. As he plodded on through the heavy soil his temper did not improve, and he was talking to himself by the time he came upon Travers, giving his team their wind at the top of the hill leading up from the creek.

"What kept you?" he demanded when he came within a rod of the wagon. "Here's the outfit shut down waiting for water, and you—"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Harris—"

"That ain't what I asked you. You can't make steam with sorrow. What have you been foolin' about?"

"I haven't been foolin'. As to what delayed me—well, you're delaying me

MOUNTAIN AGRICULTURE

Conducted by Mr. Robert F. Spence, Farm Demonstrator and Special Investigator

A GREAT MOVEMENT

Having seen some of the results of the boys and girls' agricultural clubs in three counties in Eastern Kentucky, we believe that its importance cannot be overstated, nor too much space be given to urging boys and girls to join a club. It was our observation that the schools that had best and most enthusiastic clubs were the best schools. The most interested boys and girls, those who were getting most out of school, were club boys and girls. If we were teaching school and wanted to make a success, we would organize a club. If we were a school trustee and wanted to see our school doing something, we would encourage the organization of a club. And if we were a boy in school—well, do not you forget there would be a club in our school.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY A PROCLAMATION

To the People of Kentucky Greetings: Every boy in the common schools of Kentucky, and for that matter, every girl, should join the Junior Agricultural Club.

Know the soil on which you live. Know the joy of producing from the soil. Learn the independence which comes from contact with the soil when it produces wealth. Learn to know nature, as it is made to yield everything which gives and sustains life. Learn at least that character is built in God's clean out-of-doors. All of this and more besides comes, and will come to you from real active membership in the Junior Agricultural Club of Kentucky.

Therefore, I proclaim the week of December 6-11, inclusive, as enrolment week for the school children of Kentucky.

Given under my hand, as Governor of this Commonwealth of Kentucky, this twenty-second day of November, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty and in the One-Hundred and Ninth Year of the Commonwealth.

Mr. R. F. Spence,
County Agent,
Berea, Kentucky.

Dear Mr. Spence:

I will write you a few lines in regard to my trip to the State Fair. Having never been to Louisville, my father decided it would be best to go with me. He stayed one day and returned home. We left Berea about 4:00 a. m. and arrived in Louisville about 1:00 p. m. Mr. Mahue met us at the train and guided us to the fair grounds, and there we met some of our State men. Then after I got straightened up in my tent and answered to roll call, I was turned loose for the rest of the evening. I went around with some of the boys to see the live stock and there spent most of the evening.

The next morning, after we got up and answered to roll call and ate breakfast, we had a lecture from Mr. Martin, a poultry man from the State University. After playing several games, we had another lecture by Mr. Nelson. He talked about his experiences when he was State Leader in 1915.

On Wednesday we were turned loose most of the day to look around. I was very much surprised to find that there were so many things in the State I had never seen or heard of.

On Thursday we had a lecture from a health officer. She told about the most fatal diseases, and how they are caused. We were then turned loose till dinner; we divided into parties and went to see the poultry. After that we went to see the races. They certainly have some fast horses. There were several airplanes there.

now. Better jump on and ride up with me."

"So you won't tell me, eh? You think you can do what you like with my team and my time, and it's none of my business. We'll see whose business it is."

I saw six in the air at one time. A. L. Wilson, one of the most famous aviators in the United States, changed planes 1,000 feet in the air every day I was there.

On Saturday we were busy packing up to come home, but I took time to see the $10,000 race run and then I left.

I am very grateful to you and other State leaders who helped plan this trip, and I am sorry that club boys can't get more than one free trip. But I know there are other boys who would enjoy it as much as I did, and I will do all I can to have another go from my club next year.

Yours truly,

Ireland is pursuing a policy of terrorism that is disturbing to England. Not only the police and soldiers are in danger, but plots against officials, buildings and bridges are being discovered. England is not disposed to yield to such methods, and is opening internment camps which are being filled with large numbers of radical advocates of independence. Meanwhile Parliament is considering the Home Rule Bill, which England expects will be passed by the Lords at an early date.

MOUNTAIN VOLUNTEER BAND
The Mountain Volunteer Band met in the Parish House Sunday, November 28, at 3:30 p.m.

Owing to the fact that the president was in the hospital and had not sufficiently published the meeting, there was a small crowd present. But great interest and enthusiasm was shown by those present.

The discussion was led by Mr. Lock, of the College, on the topic, "The Mountain Country School." Short talks were given by others and experiences related by some who had taught in the mountains.

The principal thought that was left with us was that the mountain people of the South are equal to any people, but they are in need of leaders to direct their thought and action towards the definite goal of reclaiming the mountains for the mountain people for Christ.

Two new members were added to the already large roll, and the secretary was instructed to send the president a short note expressing our regret that he could not be with us.

The next meeting of the Band will be held Sunday, December 12. Everybody come.

Y. W. C. A.

The three divisions of the Y. W. C. A. met in Upper Chapel Sunday night at 8:30. The meeting was a recognition service for the new members. There are 157 new members, a large number of which took part in the service.

There were also reports given by the girls who attended the Blue Ridge Conference last summer. There were four speakers: Beulah Whit, Minnie Klar, Lucy Sievers and Lillian Neal. The meeting was one of the most successful that the Y. W. C. A. has had this year.

Rev. Sam Higginbottom, a missionary from India, was in Berea on Tuesday and delivered three lectures on his work among the lepers and outcasts of that country. He vividly portrayed the poverty, illiteracy, unsanitary conditions, evils of the caste system, and status of women there. A goodly number of townspeople attended his addresses.

ALL COLLEGE SOCCER

The last soccer game was played off by members chosen from all the departments to form teams of the best material in the Institution. These men were arranged into a first and a second "all college" team, the first team winning by a score of 2-0.

Because of the slippery ground, the game was not as intense as indications promised. However, the first team gave the spectators an idea of what is to be expected in the future of soccer.

The first goal was made by a well placed, long shot from the left wing after the ball had traveled consistently over the goal line by the right wing. The defensive side had fumbled it.

By way of comment it may be said that this is the first "all college" team ever chosen from the five schools and the first "all college" soccer team the college has ever produced. Incidentally, also, Berea College ranks among the first schools of its sort to have organized soccer in its athletic program.

Normal Department

THANKSGIVING DINNER

The Normal dining-rooms were the scene of much festivity Thursday evening. The larger dining-room was decorated for the occasion with sheaves of corn; dried leaves were strewn on the floor, and the room was fixed in every way possible to represent an outdoor harvest scene. But best of all was the dinner, with the menu worded in old Pilgrim style. Then followed the program. All the teachers, students, and visitors gathered into the larger dining-room, where the program was given. All the numbers were splendid. Dean McAllister gave a Thanksgiving address. Mr. Gilligan, Lloyd Rackley, Walla Wagers, John Wilson, Clarence Holt, Bertha Wynn, Lucille McClure, Florence Baker, Arlie Baker, and Henry Todd, each contributed to our enjoyment of the program. The toasts given to our faculty were quite humorous and original.

The students of the Training School gave an entertainment in the Chapel Saturday evening.

Last Wednesday morning the Normal students voted to organize a students' chapel period to be held twice a month, in which they could meet without the teachers and discuss among themselves matters relating to their welfare and the various problems of their school life.

Several former students of the Normal School visited here last week. Ernest Miller, Ethan Whicker, Rhoda and Lenna Witt, Mary Fletcher, Rosa Dalton and Stella Tapp were here during the holidays. Miss Columbia Sellers visited her sister, Miss Kate Sellers, last week.

The Normal-College football game last Thursday was another tie, the score being 7 to 7.
In the game between the Normal and Academy Departments on Monday, one of our players, Leonard Little, was taken from the field badly bruised. He was removed to the hospital and it is reported his arm was found to be badly crushed and dislocated. Just how serious his injuries are we cannot tell yet. The students from both departments gave him a fitting tribute as he was carried from the field.

Last Monday night, at 7:30, Prof. and Mrs. J. M. Guiliams entertained their Sunday-school classes, consisting of twenty-five young ladies and thirty-three young men, with a social.

A dismembered menagerie, composed of cats, dogs, horses, goats, chickens, etc., very much in need of re-assembling, afforded much amusement. Games were played and about 9:00 o'clock Santa Claus appeared with a large basket of oranges and candy, which he distributed among the happy youngsters. All enjoyed a good time and went home early enough to be at class Tuesday morning.

Vocational Schools

Brent Carter, a graduate of the Vocational Department, is visiting his many Berea friends this week.

Rev. Samuel Rice, once a teacher in the Foundation Department, is visiting Berea this week.

Jim Smith, who was in the Vocational Department last year, was in Berea this week.

The smiling face of Fred Wilson appeared in the Vocational dining-room one day last week.

Friends of Clinton Fugate will be glad to know that he is back in Berea again.

John Jennings spent the week-end visiting home folks.
Ernest Grimes spent Wednesday afternoon, Wednesday night and Thursday morning of last week in Richmond.

The Academy

THANKSGIVING BANQUET

Academy students usually consider the annual Thanksgiving banquet as one of the great occasions of the year, and the banquet of 1920 was no exception. Thanks to Mr. Cole and his active decorating committee, the Academy dining-room had been transformed into a charming banquet-hall by the combined use of wood greens and the Academy colors. Some one remarked that it was worth coming to the dinner just to see the boarding-hall laden down and groaning with such an abundance of roast chicken, cranberry sauce, and similar dainties.

The waiters (and others) seemed to enjoy their social privileges to the fullest extent. Much amusement was furnished by a table of girls who were dressed to represent the various lady members of the Academy Faculty. These girls acted out their parts very cleverly, out-Raymonding Miss Raymond and out-Weidling Mrs. Weidler (to paraphrase Shakespeare).

At a quarter past six the Academy students from the Commons joined the big Academy family-circle, and then the program of toasts began under the leadership of Mrs. Peck. To commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims three hundred years ago, the speeches were made to center about the subject of "The Significance of the Pilgrim Fathers to our America of Today." In a simple, forceful way Miss Jessie Teets told the story of the coming of the Pilgrims to our country. Edward Roark, responding to the subject, "The Mayflower Compact," made a stirring appeal to America to preserve the Pilgrim respect for law and order, to counteract the menace of Bolshevism. Then the program was varied by a song "How Firm a Foundation," sung in "yeldene stile" by Miss Lula Owens. It seemed for the moment as though we were back in the Pilgrim meeting house. Jordan Bowers told of the trials of the Pilgrim Fathers, and challenged modern Americans to show as great fortitude in the present need. Then George Malluk, dressed as an Indian, related some of the traditions of his tribe concerning the coming of the Pilgrims and their fairness to their Indian neighbors. This was followed by a song, "America for Me," sung by a chorus of Wright House girls dressed to represent the foreigners of our America. Oney Gifford then surprised his audience by showing how thoroughly alive and American the Pilgrim youths were in their love for sport. Z. T. McKinney toasted the 'Pilgrim Mothers, Sisters and Sweethearts' with so much feeling that it seemed almost as though he wished the Pilgrim girls were living now in Berea. The most entertaining part of the program, at least to many, was the scene between John Alden and Priscilla Mullins. Comer Johnson as John Alden was just serious enough, and Leah Stevens as Priscilla was just coquettish enough to bring down the house in a burst of applause. Sam Hughes, in a direct and vigorous way, told the story of the first Thanksgiving Day, and recalled to us some of the things we have to be thankful for, among them such a promising Academy football team for the coming game. This speech was followed by a chorus of James Hall girls, who sang, with fine effect, "The Breaking Waves Dashed High." As the time for closing had come, Dean Matheny made his concluding remarks very brief, and the program was brought to an end with three long raps for Dean Matheny and a verse of "We're All Good Fellows." Too bad, after all, that Thanksgiving Day comes only once a year!

VOCATIONAL SPRINGS SURPRISE

The most interesting soccer game of the season was played Thanksgiving Day, at 3:30 p. m., on Main Athletic Field. Academy vs. Vocational.

In the first half the Academy team did some good playing. They kept the ball on Vocational's territory the greater part of the time. They made several attempts to kick goal, but Tabor kept wide-awake and blocked the ball each time.

In the second half the Academy team started well again. Middleton tried twice to kick goal but kicked too high each time.

About the middle of the half the Vocational team, taking the ball past the front line, carried it through the back field and Jones kicked goal. In a few minutes after the kick off Eversole carried the ball about forty yards down the field and kicked goal from about twenty-yard line. The game ended with everyone more interested in soccer than before.

It is expected that there will be some snappy teams next season, as the boys seem to be more interested now than they were the first of the season.

The Academy Country Home girls had a rare treat Monday evening in the way of a turkey dinner given by Wesley A. Rhodhamel of West Palm Beach, Fla. Besides the host the following guests were present: Comer Johnson, Clifford Parsons, Jordan Bowers, Stanley Hall, Charles Taylor, Sam Oliver, Otis Wells, Levi Brooks, Millard Weir, Hugh Turner, Gurney Franklin.

All Depends.

"Can you support my daughter in the style she's been accustomed to?" asked the father of the young man who sought his daughter in marriage. "Well," replied the young man thoughtfully, "is she strong for a $500 baby grand piano or a $5 talking machine?"

THE FLIGHT OF THE OLD BIRDS
Says the old he-bird to the old she-bird,

"Will you take a flight with me?"
Says the old she-bird to the old he-bird,

"I'll look in the glass and see."
The old she-bird has looked in the glass,
And has smothered her wrinkles fair.
She has rubbed a powder puff under her nose
And covered her thin grey hair.

And she is ready to take the road,
And the old he-bird stands by.
In spite of the weight of sixty years.
These two old birds will fly.

And they will take the backward road,
The road to the long ago;
And they will look for their youth again
In the land where the roses grow.

And they will find that land again
By the road they have trod before,
But the springs are dry and the fruit is dust,
And the roses bloom no more.

Cleveland Police Seize 100 Quarts.
Cleveland, O.—In a raid which lasted six hours police claim to have found one of the largest "blind tigers" ever discovered here. The proprietor of the establishment, who gave his name as Michael Gullie, was charged with violation of the liquor law.
